 Belt Size: _____

Sizing: The most accurate measurement for sizing a needlepoint belt is from the point where the buckle meets the leather to the most worn hole.

Design Considerations for Belt Projects

Extra "Waste" Rows: Two rows of stitched on the top and bottom edge will be turned over in the belt making process. We recommend stitching two extra rows to prevent loss of design.

Total Length: If your needlepoint is too long for your desired belt size, the belt finisher may have to cut into your needlepoint. To prevent cutting into the needlepoint, we recommend the total length of your needlepoint to be about 4" shorter than the measured belt size. Example: If your belt size is 38", the needlepoint should be 34" in length.

Visible Design: It is best to not include any crucial design elements, names, initials, dates, etc on the very ends of the stitched work as they may be covered when the needlepoint is joined with the leather. Personal details should be stitched about 2" in from the ends of your needlepoint.
